Introduction

A successful online course gives you the ability to impact the lives of people around the world. Rather than working one-on-one and trading your time for money, you can increase your income and help more people at the same time. However, creating your course is just one part of the equation. The way you launch and market it will make the difference between a course that impacts thousands and one that sits silently online, hidden from the very people it could help.

For this course, you should already have put in the time and energy to design, develop, and set up your own online course. You've defined your target audience, decided on initial pricing, and are all ready to receive payment. You may even have tested out the course with a few students. Everything is ready for the big launch and now you just need to get it in front of the right people who will pay for it.

In this course, you'll look in detail at how you can successfully launch and market your online course. You'll find everything you need including how to create sales pages that convert, email sequences that create a buzz, a webinar that turns potential customers into buyers and much more. This course is your blueprint for a successful launch and subsequent sales, and with that, you will achieve your business and revenue targets.

- ✓ Consolidate and implement your learning and plan future action steps, so that you can achieve the goals you set for this course and develop further.

This course is broken down into 12 modules to take you step-by-step through launching and marketing your online course.

The modules follow a logical order, so while you can skip around if you want, it's best to work through them one at a time.

As you go through each module, use your Action Guide to help you complete the Action Steps at the end of each.

Action Steps:

Before we start the course, take a minute to think about what you want to get out of it.

In the Action Guide, write down three skills you expect to gain.

Now that you're clear about what you want this course to deliver, we can get started.

Module 1 – Get Ready to Market Your Course

You've already put in a lot of effort to design and develop your online course, and you're ready to see sales skyrocket. But you might be feeling frustrated if you've been trying to sell your course and not succeeding. If that's the case, remember that nothing is wasted. All of your experience up to now has taught you something positive, even if it hasn't led to sales of your course just yet.

You're ready to take the next step, so in this module we'll review what's happened to date so you're in a powerful place to move forward.

Reflect on Your Experience

You need energy and motivation to power through a launch, so your mindset needs to be in the right place. Believe in yourself and your online course and that it can deliver on the transformation it promises.

Even the most experienced of entrepreneurs have doubts. But they don't let their doubts get in the way of action. If you're hesitant about going into a launch, ask yourself these questions first:

- How am I feeling about the launch and marketing of my course?
- How certain am I that my course will provide solutions to my ideal students?
- How confident am I that I can find all the information I need to make this a successful launch?

- What do I need to do to keep my motivation through the pre-launch to cart close stages?

You will already have certain aspects of your course launch in place. For example, support systems in your course platform, so you aren't starting from zero. You already have online content about you and your business. Look at what topics and formats are most popular with visitors and use this information when it comes to your marketing activities for your course.

If you've done a launch in the past, gather together your metrics from those experiences and review what went well and what might need changing.

If you haven't sold yet, think about what has stopped you. You might need to tweak your mindset to build your confidence.

Be Clear about What You Want

Set specific goals for your launch and make sure these align with your overall business goals.

To work out how many sales you need, write down:

- How much you want to earn from this launch (target income)
- How much you have to earn to cover the costs (essential income)

For example, if you need to make 1000 and your course price is 497, you'll need to sell two courses. If your preferred income is 3000, you'll need to make 6 sales.

Use this calculation to review your own situation. If the figures don't add up, take another look at your course price and adjust it accordingly.

This is also the time to decide on a budget for advertising and other costs.

Finalize Your Course

Now is the time to make any small changes you need to your existing course. Review your target market to ensure that your course solves a specific problem they face. However, now isn't the time for a complete overhaul of your course. If that is needed, then you aren't ready to start selling.

Check that you have a clear course summary as a basis for marketing which includes:

- Who the course is for – your ideal target market
- What problem it solves/how students' lives will be different as a result – these will be the benefits of the course
- High level course description – not too detailed on the features of the course
