Introduction

A strong social media presence is essential to business success. It cultivates relationships, establishes expertise and brand recognition, promotes engagement, and converts followers into prospects and customers. However, while social media content and campaigns have a large presence in many businesses' marketing plans, it's typically from a tactical perspective. There's a heavy focus on content scheduling, platforms, tools, and content calendars. What's most often missing is the strategy behind all this activity.

But without a strategy, social media is at best a roll of the dice and at worst an exercise in futility. Anybody who has managed professional accounts recognizes this. Your content needs to be fresh and intriguing, appeal to your target audience, be relevant to your brand and business goals, and be delivered consistently.

Top Signs You Need a Social Media Strategy

- You are posting sporadically without any goals
- You no longer feel inspired by your content
- You aren't seeing any financial returns
- You have observed a drop in engagement
- Your social media metrics aren't painting an accurate picture

- You are posting sporadically without any goals
- You no longer feel inspired by your content
- You aren't seeing any financial returns
- You have observed a drop in engagement and prospects aren't doing what you want them to do (e.g., click, sign up, purchase)
- Your social media metrics aren't painting an accurate picture of your business reality (e.g., lots of followers, no sales)

A social media strategy is your plan of action. It details what you want to do and achieve, allowing you to measure your success and adjust if necessary. Your strategy will give you the tools and the focus to consistently and powerfully engage with your audience, create content, develop and execute campaigns, and motivate your followers to act.

Yes, a social media strategy consists of a tangible plan with goals, tactics, timelines, and analytics. But what makes a strategy so powerful is the direction, vision, and motivation it provides.

An effective social media strategy will inspire you to:

- Jump in, implement, and show up for your audience every day
- Have fun identifying and creating content you and your audience love (otherwise you won't stick to it)
- Focus on the channels where your audience can be found
- Align your content with your business brand and goals
- Generate results and reach your business objectives
- Measure your results and adjust where necessary

By the time you complete this course, you will have developed a comprehensive, manageable, and motivating social media strategy that delivers results. As you implement the strategy, you will build your online presence and naturally create content and campaigns that appeal to your target and align with your business brand and goals.

Many people worry that with the rise of TikTok, Instagram Reels, and other viral video sites on social media, you will literally need to incorporate a 'song and dance' into your strategy to get results. Nothing could be further from the truth. You can create fun content that will engage viewers in a way that feels right for you and your brand. This, in part, is what a good social strategy will help you uncover.

You'll find a number of resources and ideas in this course that will give you the confidence to not only create your winning strategy, but to also execute it successfully.

Here is your roadmap through the course:
